

Server

We are going to have our server handle fetching information from our RancidTomatoes database, where we will have tables for reviews, users/reviewers, and movies. The server will, when requested by the client via a server side controller, construct and send objects containing required information to a client side controller.

Client

The client will be responsible for presenting views to the user via a client-side/view controller that the server contacts to change the view. There will be some client-side functionality for updating the view, as well, as we will be implementing a search bar using AJAX (similar to project 7B). The client will take input (usernames, passwords, etc.) and send it to the server side controller that will in turn query the database, change the database, and/or alter the view via the client side controller.
